Is Hub's future in flux?

Local CEO pokes fun at Menino in video of future of Boston ◗ New group tries to stir young Bostonians ◗ Cites lack of late night options, brain drain as issues ◗ Video called 'divisive'

A video posted recently on YouTube is hoping to stir young Bostonians and takes aim at city leaders for holding down the Hub and causing its "brain drain."

Greg Selkoe, the CEO of the Boston-based online streetwear retailer Karmaloop, helped to found the group behind the video — the Future Boston Alliance.

The more-than-two-minute video posted Saturday is a mission statement from the group that officially launched about a week ago and says its criticism comes from a love and desire to improve Boston.

"It's not a zero sum game. We want to be frank and we're trying to be honest and have a real conversation, which includes criticism," said Selkoe, 37. "At the end of the day the point is not to draw a line whether you're with us or against us."

▶ Karmaloop owner Greg Selkoe started the grassroots organization Future Boston Alliance to reduce restrictions on Hub bars, entertainment venues, and cultural organizations.

ERIK BALDASSARI/METRO

While the narrator of the video is quick to say that the group loves Boston, the video begins with the narrator saying that "Boston is less than the sum of its parts."

"We don't want our city that will be a place that will ban moshing or tell Nike what kind of shirts they can put in their windows," the narrator explains while a cartoon of Mayor Thomas Menino uses a bullhorn to yell at people and businesses. Menino is then briefly joined by a cartoon of Russian President Vladimir Putin.

Future Boston Alliance employs more than 200, 85 percent of whom are from outside Massachusetts, Selkoe says.

Selkoe said the group has so far raised about $50,000 in commitments. The hope is to expand the group's website, hold events that promote a dialogue of ideas and form a network of support for entrepreneurs and self-starters.

Selkoe said his company has more than 200 employees with 85 percent being from outside Massachusetts. He said it has been hard to recruit for his company because of the reputation of Boston as being a racist city with poor public transportation and a lack of late-night options in everything from entertainment to exercise.

"We're coming from a place where we want to have fun and do it creatively and hopefully have a good time making change," he said.

Who is Greg Selkoe?

Here's what we know about Future Boston's founder:

- Selkoe was born and raised in Jamaica Plain.
- The former Boston Redevelopment Authority staff worker started Karamloop in 2000.
- His company also launched KarmaloopTV, an online video channel that bills itself as the "world leader for youth culture."
- Selkoe contributed about a dozen blog posts on Huffington Post dating back to 2010.
- Selkoe said he has no political ambitions of his own, but supports a candidate besides Menino for mayor.

The League of American Bicyclists ranked Massachusetts third in its 2012 survey.

Chelsea strip club employee charged in patron stabbing

Club staffer is accused of stabbing Somerville man 10 times Pleads not guilty to attempted murder charge

ERIN BALDASSARI/METRO

▶ An employee of King Arthur's has been charged.

An employee of a Chelsea strip club is accused of stabbing a patron after an argument inside the establishment.

Jody Lassiter, 49, of Everett pleaded not guilty during his arraignment Monday, according to the Suffolk district attorney's office. He was charged with armed assault with intent to murder.

Police responded to King Arthur's Lounge just after midnight May 15 and found a 33-year-old Somerville man suffering from stab wounds. He was stabbed 10 times in the head, neck, shoulder and chest, authorities said.

"The victim's injuries were so severe that Chelsea police notified the Suffolk County State Police Detective Unit, which has jurisdiction over homicides in that city," the Suffolk district attorney's office said in a statement.

The man was rushed to Massachusetts General Hospital in critical condition. He survived the attack, but spent five days in the hospital.

When Chelsea officers arrived at the scene they learned the man was ejected from the club because he was "visibly drunk and belligerent."

Detectives later developed evidence that suggested Lassiter, a floor man at the club, argued with the man inside when the victim arrived from another bar. When the man was ejected, police believe Lassiter clocked out and followed him.

Once outside, the two men got into a fight and that's when the stabbing occurred, authorities said.

Lassiter is due back in court next month.

$50K
A judge ordered Lassiter held on $50,000 bail. Prosecutors requested he be held on $150,000.

Edible signs tell you to it's time to stop eating

Obesity has become a more serious problem than smoking in the U.S., affecting 35 percent of adults and costing hundreds of billions of dollars. Researchers from Cornell University may have found a colorful solution to overeating.

An experiment conducted on 98 college students found that people ate less when they were confronted by edible "stop signs." The research team inserted chips that had been dyed red at regular intervals of five to seven into a regular tube. On average, these students ate 52 percent less than those eating from normal tubes, researchers claimed.

"We find they provide an interruption, they say 'am I really that hungry?'" lead researcher and author of "Mindless Eating" Brian Walsink told Metro. "The people didn't know what the red chips meant but almost all of them ate one or two past it and then stopped."

Walsink attributes the findings to a disruption of the widespread "auto-eater" syndrome. "We are almost all mindless eaters and even the most controlled person is not aware of how food influences them," he said. Walsink is also the inventor of 100 calorie pack guides on food packaging, but believes his newest invention is at least twice as effective at reducing consumption.

Corroboration

While Walsink denies that the color red played a role, research from doctoral psychologists Oliver Genschow and Leonie Reutner this year found that "The presence of the color red reduces snack food and soft drink intake." In their study, subjects ate and drank significantly less from red containers than other colors.

Scientists deploy genetics in their search for bigfoot

LONDON. Scientists are turning to genetic testing to see if they can prove the existence of the elusive hairy humanoid known across the world as bigfoot, yeti and sasquatch.

A joint project between Oxford University and Switzerland's Lausanne Museum of Zoology will examine organic remains that some say belong to the creature that has been spotted in remote areas for decades.

"It's an area that any serious academic ventures into with a deal of trepidation ... It's full of eccentric and downright misleading reports," said Bryan Sykes at Oxford's Wolfson College.

"About 2 to 4 percent of the DNA of each individual European is Neanderthal."

But the team would take a systematic approach and use the latest advances in genetic testing, he added.

"There have been DNA tests done on alleged yetis and other such things but since then the testing techniques, particularly on hair, have improved a lot due to advances in forensic science," he told Reuters. REUTERS

Millennials are the new poverty class

Does America have a new poverty class that leans closer to Charles Dickens than it does to Charles Darwin?

OK, maybe "survival of the fittest" doesn't have much to do with it, or at least it isn't the most compelling reason that younger Americans have fallen into the poverty class. After all, the "bad luck" generation hit their early 20s in the teeth of an economic gale — which hasn't really abated for them.

But the data doesn't lie, and it does support the notion that younger U.S. adults are sinking into poverty.

Right now, the U.S. unemployment rate for the age 20-24 demographic stands at 13.5 percent, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, compared to 8.1 percent for the general population.

51% Those making less than $25,000 in annual income who reported using prepaid debit cards during the past year.

Besides the larger realization among Millennials — and many economists — that between automation and outsourcing, good job opportunities are scarce, younger adults are moving back into their parents' houses because they're broke.

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, 5.9 million young adults between the ages of 25 and 34 lived with their parents by 2011, up from 4.7 million in 2008. The agency also says that 45 percent of those "double-uppers" generate incomes that are below the poverty lines.

Catholic order head admits hiding scandal

ROME. The leader of the Legionaries of Christ admitted yesterday he knew for years the scandal-plagued Roman Catholic order's most famous priest had fathered a child but still allowed the popular cleric to preach about morality.

The order, still reeling from revelations that its founder was a sex abuser and drug addict with two secret families, suffered another major blow last week when it admitted that Father Thomas Williams, an American based in Rome, also had led a double life.

But the question that had been left hanging after the first admission was how long Williams' superiors knew.

In a letter to members published on the order's website, the order's leader, Father Alvaro Corcuera, said he found out about Williams's child "early in my new assignment" as director-general, which began in 2005. REUTERS

BRAYDEN SIMMS

POLITICAL WORLDLINESS FOR AN IMPOLITE WORLD

@METROPOLITIK

For complaints, suggestions and digital attaboys, e-mail us at brayden.simms@metro.us.

It can be hard to tell who's winning the Bain Capital debate that's been roiling political circles this week. Oh sure, diehard partisans will insist their message is getting across and that their opponents are flailing, but we certainly needn't believe them. Yet there is a winner, and that winner is us.

It started on Sunday talk show "Meet the Press" when Newark, N.J., Mayor Cory Booker, a Democrat, criticized an ad put out by President Obama's re-election campaign. Booker judged the attack ad — which contrasted Mitt Romney's touted business experience with the lives destroyed in the wake of his company's highly profitable machinations — as "nauseating," explaining that it made him "very uncomfortable."

The fallout began immediately. Republicans pounced on the quotes, while Booker quickly walked them back, clarifying — and then re-clarifying — that he in fact stands with Obama 100 percent.

But the damage — or rather, opportunity — had been done. With no haste, another pair of Democrats, former Tennessee pol Harold Ford Jr. and Obama's former "auto czar" Steve Rattner, jumped aboard the Free Private Equity bandwagon, and Team Romney spun it all as an Obama attack on freedom.

Yet it's not too difficult to suss out what is going on here. Ford is currently a managing director for Morgan Stanley. Rattner co-founded a private equity firm and worked for Lehman Brothers, Morgan Stanley and others. Booker is a sitting politician whose job is directly linked to the financial sector: Bain and other similar firms contributed hundreds of thousands to his last election.

"I'm not about to sit here and indict private equity," Booker said. No, he's not, but not due to any strong moral convictions. Booker and his compatriots have a clear conflict of interest here; in Washington as elsewhere, you don't bite the hand that feeds you.

But nor must we eat from the hand that bites us. (Pardon the strained metaphor.) The financial industry bankrolls the entire political complex, making it practically impossible to oversee. Any time the conversation gets shifted to the real levers of power, and the arms that pull them, is a moment when we can honestly discuss the problems before us.

Is Romney gaining the upper hand? Did Obama score points? Who knows? Let's linger on this accidental peek into the smoke-filled room.

Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author, or any opinions expressed on its pages.

QUOTED

Priorities USA, the super PAC supporting President Obama's re-election campaign, released an ad of its own, featuring quotes from Republicans attacking Romney's Bain record:

▶ "It's the ultimate insult when Mitt Romney comes to South Carolina and tells you he feels your pain — because he caused it. ... There is something inherently wrong when getting rich off failure and sticking it to someone else is how you do your business." Rick Perry

▶ "[They] loot companies, leave behind broken families, broken towns."
NEWT GINGRICH

▶ "Governor Romney has claimed to have created over 100,000 jobs at Bain, and people are wanting to know: Is there proof of that claim? ... And that's fair, that's not negative campaigning." Sarah Palin

▶ "Governor Romney enjoys firing people."
JON HUNTSMAN

▶ "While Mitt Romney was at Bain Capital, almost one out of every four companies they were involved with went bankrupt ..." John Brabender

The Falcon 9 rocket lifted off at 3:44 a.m. from a refurbished launch pad just south of where NASA launched its now-retired space shuttles. Flight lands after woman's 'suspicious behavior'

WASHINGTON. A US Airways flight from Paris to Charlotte, N.C., was diverted to an airport in Maine where it landed safely after reports of a passenger showing "suspicious behavior," U.S. officials said yesterday.

Two fighter jets were scrambled in response to the incident on US Airways Flight 787, which landed safely in Bangor, Maine.

House Homeland Security Chairman Peter King said a female passenger, who was a French citizen born in Cameroon, handed a note to a flight attendant saying she had a surgically implanted device.

"Doctors on the flight checked her out and did not see any sign of recent scars," King said. REUTERS

Facebook trails off, regulators call for review

Facebook's shares fell sharply again yesterday and two top U.S. financial regulators called for a review of the circumstances surrounding its troubled initial public offering last week.

The separate calls for review, by Securities and Exchange Commission Chairman Mary Schapiro and FINRA Chairman Rick Ketchum, added pressure on the company, its underwriters and the Nasdaq, all of which have taken blame for the stock's harried opening and subsequent sharp decline.

After Friday's nearly flat close and Monday's 11 percent plunge, Facebook shares were down 5.9 percent at $32.01 in midafternoon trading. At that price the company has shed more than $16 billion in market capitalization from its $38-per-share offering price last week.

Volume was again heavy, with 74 million shares changing hands. That followed turnover of 168 million shares Monday and 581 million on IPO day.

With Facebook shares all but impossible to sell short, investors have sought out almost any related vehicle to bet against the social network. Over the past three trading days, prices plunged on two closed-end funds that owned pre-IPO shares. Firsthand Technology Value Fund and GSV Capital Corp. both dropped more than 25 percent even though their Facebook holdings make up only a small fraction of assets.

THE WORD

Metro's Monica Weymouth shares her take on the world of gossip @monicaatmetro monica.weymouth@metro.us

The feed ...

▶ Checking in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, Seth MacFarlane has motion sickness, Nicole Richie is keeping it together, Kirstie Alley is up early and Alec Baldwin finds Cannes a bit noisy.

@SethMacFarlane
Dear Hollywood: It's time to retire the "found footage" movie genre and start holding the camera steady again. I'm getting queasy.

@nicolerichie
I don't cry when I get my bangs trimmed, so I'm pretty sure I don't need therapy anymore

@kirstiealley
PS..since when do FedX guys come at 6:45 AM???

@alecbaldwin
Some of these restaurants are really just clubs that serve food...

Richie

Mendes, Gosling as boring as us

As you may know, Ryan Gosling and Eva Mendes have been holding hands, going on coffee runs and otherwise surfacing every Sunday afternoon looking adorable together.

But it now seems that last month's breakup rumors might not have been purely the work of jealous gossip columnists. After accompanying Gosling to Thailand for a film shoot and playing house, Mendes wants to make it official and share a Netflix account, according to Us Weekly.

"He says he wants to slow down and not live with her yet," a questionable friend tells the magazine, adding that Gosling is growing distant while Mendes is learning to cook. "But he doesn't want to lose her."

We get that these two are merely humans under their impossibly beautiful facades, but would it kill them to add a little glamour for our viewing pleasure? We can watch this scenario play out in a Target parking lot.

▶ Don't you have a dishwasher fight to attend to, Ryan?

Nothing bronze can stay

Mama-to-be Snooki won't be crashing in the "Jersey Shore" house this summer, reports TMZ. Instead, she'll rent a peaceful private pad nearby for the filming of Season 6, leaving recently rehabbed The Situation on his own with the boozy roommates.

We'll give the show one more shot, but as soon as Ronnie skips the club to watch "House" reruns, we're out.

Snooki

Why, Internet?

The Internet's a strange, dark, little marketplace, but even we weren't ready for this: A mystery bidder paid $18,000 for a pair of underwear once worn by Queen Elizabeth. The royal undies were placed on eBay by the estate of the late Joseph de Bicske Dobronyi, a sculptor who claimed Her Majesty left them on a private plane.

We have so many questions — and yet, we're pretty sure we don't want any answers.

Will Smith has his eye on the White House

In an interview with the BBC, Will Smith says he'd not only like to play Barack Obama, but he's pretty sure the part is his someday. "It's about the ears! You know, people see the ears, and Barack and I both have the ears," he says. "So I'm the most natural choice."

We're on board — but only if he can work in an encore of Bill Pullman's epic "Independence Day" speech.

Talking points

Cyrus wants to talk about sex

Nineteen-year-old former Disney star Miley Cyrus thinks frank discussions about sex shouldn't be off-limits for kids. "Girls who base how much they're worth on the sexual favors they can do for somebody, that makes me really sad, because sex is actually really beautiful," she says during an interview for "The Conversation with Amanda de Cadenet" this week. "It's ignorant to not talk to your kids about it or make it seem like it's not as cool or magical as it actually is."

Cyrus

Katy Perry single again

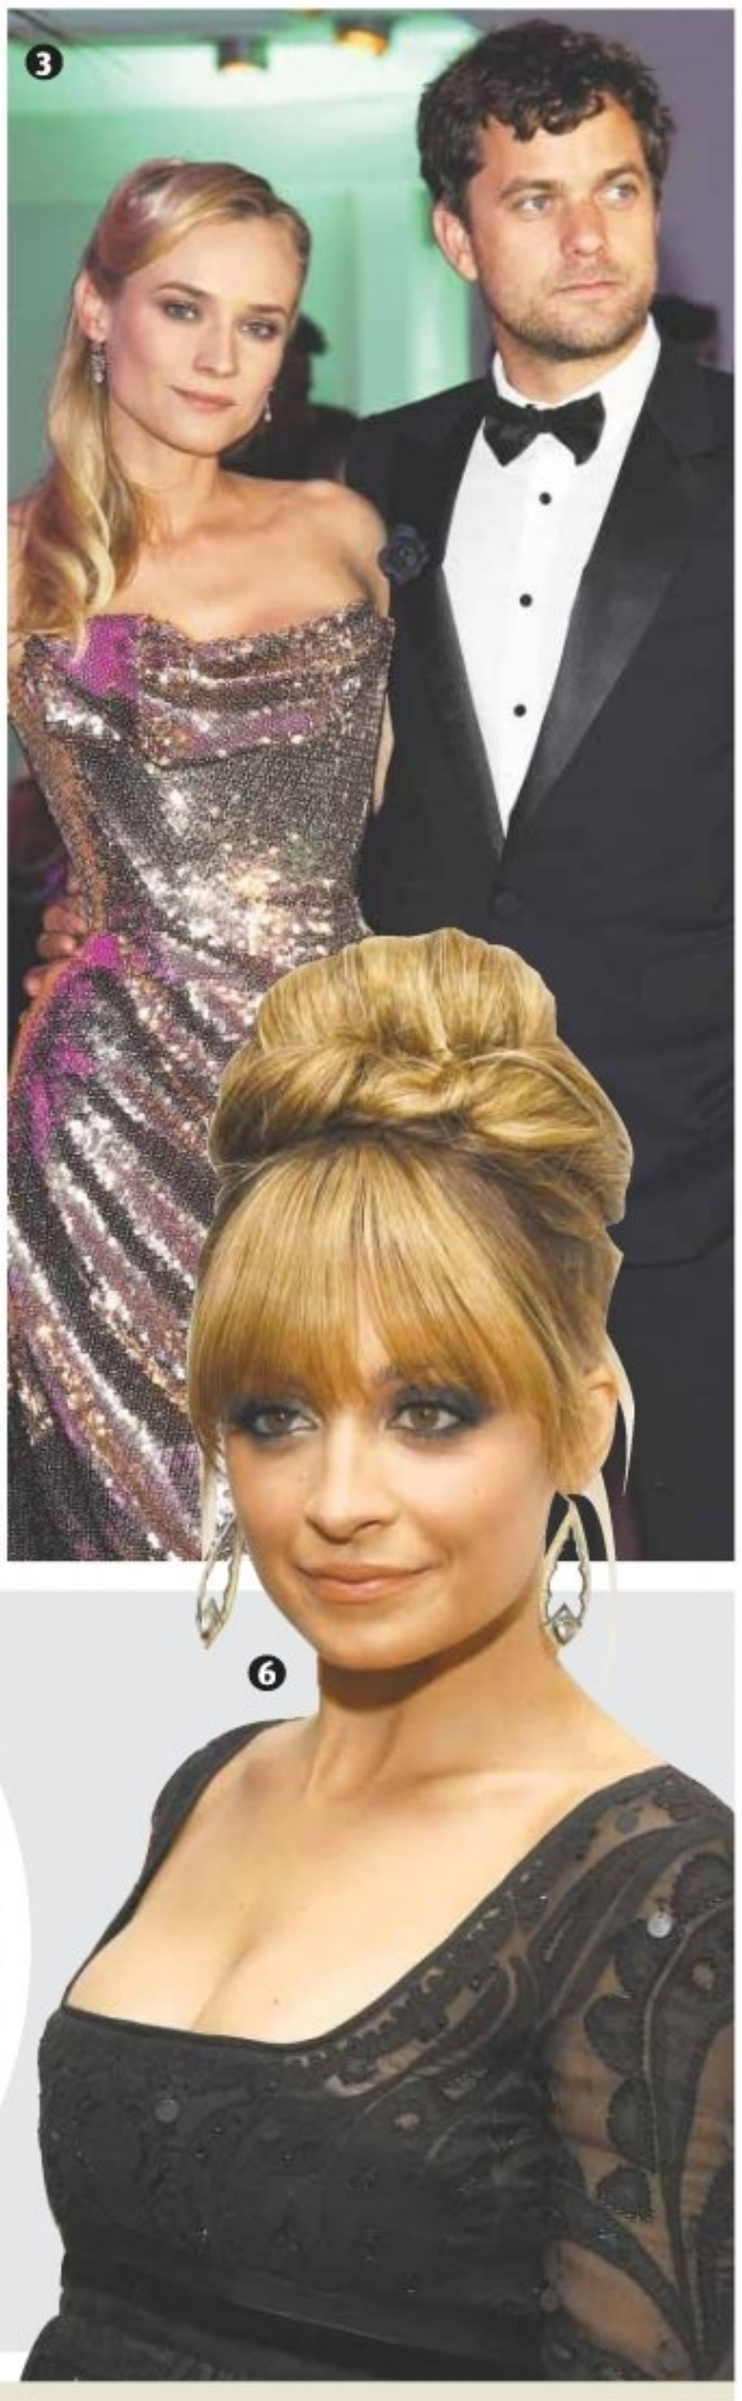
Katy Perry's brief romance with Florence and the Machine guitarist Robert Ackroyd is over, according to Us Weekly. "It wasn't that serious," a source says. "It's not a nasty thing, and they are still talking, but Katy told him to do his thing and they'll talk soon." Perry and Ackroyd started dating about a month ago, and were first spotted together at the Coachella music festival.

No resting on royal wedding night

Prince William admits he didn't get much rest the night before his wedding last year. "[The crowds] were singing and cheering all night long, so the excitement of that, the nervousness of me and everyone singing — I slept for about half an hour," William says in an interview with ITV for a documentary about his grandmother, the Queen. And as for his destiny of eventually taking the throne as King of England, he admits he's resigned to his fate. "There's not much wiggle room left for me to try and find my own path, but I will do. It's just a matter of learning what's gone before me," William says.

Everyone suing in Travolta suits

The John Travolta sexual assault allegations are taking a strange turn, with lawyers on the side of the accusers now fighting with each other. Okorie Okorocha, the lawyer who originally represented the first John Does to accuse Travolta of unwanted sexual advances, is now suing Gloria Allred, claiming she is stealing his clients, according to Hollyscoop.



Today in parties we'd like an invite to

1: Sneak attack kiss! Ewan McGregor and wife Eve Mavrakis stopped by the superswank Filmmakers Dinner at the Cannes Film Festival on Monday.

2: A fresh-off-the-beach Gerard Butler was also at the Filmmakers Dinner.

3: Diane Kruger and boyfriend Joshua Jackson stepped out at the Cannes anniversary party. True or false: She gets to call him Pacey on special occasions.

4: You heard us, Brad: Your Cannes hair looks like a B-team Jennifer Aniston bob.

5: Halle Berry was promoting Revlon's "Whipped Creme" makeup in New York yesterday — but we kind of doubt she was wearing it.

6: We love the retro-hot Nicole Richie pulled out for the Fifi Awards in New York on Monday night.

'American Idol'

REALITY. Can teen sensation Jessica Sanchez become the first gal to win the title of "American Idol" since Jordin Sparks in 2007? Or will Dave Matthews doppelganger Phillip Phillips strum his way to victory (and a lifetime on the summer festival circuit, though that already seems to be a given)? The votes are tallied and the Season 11 champ is revealed tonight. Season finale, 8 p.m., Fox

'The Middle'

COMEDY. The Hecks are caught off guard when they receive an invitation to Mike's brother's (returning guest star Norm Macdonald) wedding. They're even more surprised when they realize the ceremony is taking place at their house. Season finale, 8 p.m., ABC

'Man-Eating Super Croc'

REALITY. What sounds like a Syfy Original Movie is actually a real-life chronicle of one team's hunt for a creature that has been terrorizing a Philippine village. 8 p.m., Animal Planet

'Law & Order: SVU'

DRAMA. An underage escort is murdered. Please let this be a crossover episode with "The Killing" so we can finally know who killed Rosie Larsen. (Sorry, folks — it's not.) Season finale, 10 p.m., NBC AMBER RAY

Is David Clarke really dead on 'Revenge'? James Tupper has the answers

GETTY IMAGES

Q&A: James Tupper

What do you think is it about Emily that viewers can't get enough of?
Every guy relates to Daniel not quite having the whole story — like, "What? You're who?" Emily has mastered the Mona Lisa smile. That's the great female mystery: "Do you love me, or do you want to kill me? I can't tell." [Laughs.]

America's guilty pleasure nighttime soap, "Revenge," wraps its first season tonight at 10 on ABC. Fans of the show have been hit with twists and turns since its September premiere, so we enlisted star James Tupper, who plays the (supposedly) murdered David Clarke on the series, for some clarity as to what's really going on in this Hamptons murder mystery.

What can you tell us about tonight's finale?
[Creator Mike Kelley] is amazing because he's really an artist. What he's managed to figure out is this incredible, intricate, detailed story where every week it seems that every single person is in peril. [Laughs.] It's fun for us because we crack open a new script and at the end of a reading, everybody's like, "Oh, my God, I'm going to jail?" "This person's dead?" He's great at surprising people constantly.

How much do you know about what's going to happen in future episodes?
I'm following it like everybody else. We get it probably six weeks before you guys and we just read it then make it. But I have a general idea where it's going. At the front of every script there's a big confidentiality agreement that we all sign. So I'm not gonna tell you, but I will tell you that it's alarming. He's not locked into having all the same characters.

Good to be guilty

How do you feel about the show being people's guilty pleasure?

When I first started getting interviewed about the show, they were like, "I'm calling it my guilty pleasure." I realized that it's so fun to be that dramatic, and allow yourself to go there that people feel guilty. [Laughs.] I think "Revenge" is a lot of fun wrapped up in this sinister, pretty serious world where lots of things are at stake.

Is your character really dead?
My God, I have to tell you: I was pushing a stroller with my 3-year-old in it, and a woman yelled at me from across the street, like, "You're not dead, are you?" It's the question I get asked the most often and I get asked everywhere. It's fine, I love it. I love how invested people are in it — it's awesome. You know, as far as I know, I think I'm dead so far.

The rumor is that star Emily VanCamp is dating her co-star, Josh Bowman, who plays Daniel.
I heard that rumor. I can't confirm or deny it. I really don't know, actually. I mean, they get along great on set. They're discreet.

SpeakEasy is on a roll

While the group behind 'Xanadu' proclaims it's 'like children's theater for 40-year-old gay people,' the truth is everyone will enjoy going for a spin in this campy way-back machine

Self-referential cheese has never been so much fun. With tongue firmly planted in cheek, the SpeakEasy Stage Company delivers a veritable kitsch-fest complete with leg warmers, glow sticks, a giant disco ball and songs like "Evil Woman" and "Have You Never Been Mellow?" setting the scene.

The shorts may have been short in 1980, but Ryan Overberg (Sonny) redefines hanging by a thread in a pair that scream potential wardrobe malfunction and make you wonder how he can move, breathe or sing.

Overberg, a Boston Conservatory student, is delightfully engaging as the dimwitted artist who dreams of opening a roller disco. Strong vocals and the kind of timing you just can't teach give Overberg's Sonny the requisite "aw-shucks" charm to make you root for him to get the rink and the girl.

McCaela Donovan is sheer perfection as Clio/Kira, the muse-cum-Australian hottie who wins Sonny's heart. Spreading glitter everywhere, Donovan displays impressive vocal chops and a heretofore unseen knack for rollerskating.

Local favorite Kathy St. George lights up the stage in one of her best comic performances as both Calliope and Aphrodite. Shana Dirik is equally hilarious in dual duty as Melpomene and Medusa. Though her skating skills in the finale are — ahem — challenged, it makes live theater more fun!

With the exception of a white cloth hanging from center stage at the top of the show, the newly configured black box space makes a great roller disco. Don't forget your glitter.

Plot points

Based on the Olivia Newton-John cult film of the same name, "Xanadu" is the tale of a Greek muse (Clio) who appears in Venice Beach, Calif., in 1980 to help a young artist live his dream. Though her jealous sisters and a dastardly real estate baron have other plans, love conquers all, even Zeus.

▶ Ryan Overberg and McCaela Donovan star in "Xanadu."

A FRED-LETTER DAY

A new Fred Perry standalone store opens on Newbury Street tomorrow ◗ One of the highlights of the new store is the Amy Winehouse Collection ◗ You can go back to black — or even pink

There's something bittersweet about the opening of Boston's first standalone Fred Perry store on Newbury Street tomorrow. The famous sport-meets-street look adopted by both the U.K. mod and skinhead cultures in the '50s and '60s has more recently been popularized by such musical figures as Paul Weller, Damon Albarn and the late Amy Winehouse. In 2010, Fred Perry debuted the first Winehouse designed collection, and this spring/summer sees her final designs.

"Amy died nearly a year ago — believe it or not. It's been a strange 12 months," says Richard Martin, Fred Perry's head of global marketing. "She was very involved with the collection. We had meetings with the family after the tragedy, asking them what they wanted to do. They wanted the collection to continue, but we had to continue in a different way."

Enter PPQ designer Amy Molyneux, who created much of Winehouse's onstage wardrobe. Going forward, Molyneux will design the Amy Winehouse Foundation Collection, interpreting Winehouse's style just as Karl Lagerfeld interprets Coco Chanel for Chanel.

Royalties and fees from the collection's sales, plus a seasonal donation from Fred Perry, will go to the Amy Winehouse Foundation, which supports charities aiding young people — especially those with financial disadvantage or addiction.

"We felt that, morally, it was the only way to carry on," says Martin. "Also, for future collections, the only way to continue was to work with someone who had worked with Amy and had a true sense of her style."

LINDA LABAN
linda.laban@metro.us

Get the look

The Amy Winehouse Collection spring/summer 2012 features Winehouse's Americana take on the classic Perry polo shirt and crosses it with a bowling shirt. "Amy wore Fred Perry as a kid and knew the importance of the polo shirt and it being part of that pop-culture history," says Martin. There's also a retro print (featuring a beehived brunette) micro-mini sundress, shirtwaist dress and scarf. It's so very Winehouse.

'My Last Wish' is a social network based on death Users find friends according to what they'd like to do before they die Then maybe there's love in the air for a pair of skydivers

A new social network has an interesting premise: connecting people around the world based on what they want to do before they die.

Called "My Last Wish," the app encourages users to post wishes on a "Wish Wall" and then befriend others who might share their dreams.

"I believed in the possibility that there can be two persons in this world with the same hopes, dreams and wishes," Kirtan Thaker, co-founder of the White Lotus Corporation, the group behind the app, told Mashable. "I was confident that if we create a app where this possibility can be turned into reality, people will love this concept and they will get a chance to make friends who are unknown but [have] just one thing in common, which is the last wish."

DIGITAL VISION

▶ Find someone online who also wants to skydive and maybe you'll also discover true love.

When sharing a wish, users can also choose to attach their e-mail address or phone number so others that share their dream can connect with them. Tapping on a person's contact information within the app will add their information to the contacts list in your phone. You can also receive push notifications when people add wishes to the wall.

A palm icon appears beside wishes, allowing you to "aLike" a wish you share, or "give a five" to that person to express your support for their wish and become friends.

While definitely a little morbid, and certainly out of the ordinary, the app already has a little bit of a following. Posted wishes range from things such as traveling the world to writing a book. Thaker says that the ultimate goal behind the app is to help people make friends that share similar hopes and dreams, or even help someone potentially find his or her soul mate.

White Lotus plans to add a location-based feature to the app in the future to help you find people located physically around you, and if the iOS version of the app does well the company plans to release an Android version as well.

Facebook finally cracks the top 20 most valuable brands list

Facebook may have a ways to go to catch up to Apple as the world's most valuable company, but it is making progress as being perceived as the most valuable brand with a worth of $33.2 billion, according to one researcher.

The social networking giant cracked the top 20 of Millward Brown's BrandZ most valuable brands list for the first time. Facebook weighed in at No. 19, between Amazon (18) and Deutsche Telekom (20). Leading the list once again is Apple, followed by IBM and Google. TODD WASSERMAN FOR MASHABLE

Dr. Oz's tips to transform your health

The $1 million winner of "Transformation Nation," Dr. Oz's initiative to make over the health of the nation, will be revealed today on "The Dr. Oz Show."

According to Dr. Mehmet Oz, getting healthy isn't about living longer, it's about living and looking better today Some of his tips for getting on the right track

Get your checkup: A staggering third of Americans skip their yearly health checkup. But thinking ignorance is bliss could really mess you up.

Being "too busy" is the most common excuse for failing to go to the doctor's, says Dr. Oz, but the truth is, people don't want to be inconvenienced with bad news. "Who wants to hear they have cancer? What people don't get is that a doctor is there to guide you to better health, not make you feel bad or embarrassed," he says. "They help you understand your health so you can prevent problems in the future. They have the tools to calculate key health indicators, including blood pressure, glucose and cholesterol levels," he continues.

Enlist your peers: Studies have shown that people who lost weight by engaging in group activities were more successful at keeping it off in the long term: "The moment you go public about your proclamation of health, you're holding yourself accountable," explains Dr. Oz. "Friends will be inspired by your achievements."

Watch your waist: "Waist size predicts the amount of fat inside the intestines; it should be no more than half your height. It's the most dangerous type of fat for your body. [Too much] can put pressure on the kidneys, which can then raise your blood pressure and can also poison the liver, leading to higher cholesterol levels and diabetes," Dr. Oz says.

His shopping list

Add these to your shopping list for a health boost:

- Broccoli: The ultimate green superfood cleanses the liver and helps fight off cancer.
- 100 percent whole grain bread: Who says you have to give up carbs? This is a great way to get in fiber, which makes you feel full and reduces the risk of colon cancer.
- Milk: The perfect way to get your daily calcium dose — unless you are lactose intolerant. Choose 2 percent — it tastes the same as full-fat and also has less sugar.
- Nuts: Almonds, walnuts and cashews are full of omega-3s and encourage smart snacking.
- Green tea: It's full of antioxidants and contains low levels of caffeine, so it won't make you feel hyperactive.
- Quinoa: The super grain is rich in fiber and protein. It also happens to be gluten-free.
- Fruits and vegetables: Eat unlimited amounts, as they contain a multitude of vitamins and minerals only found in natural foods.

Not on his list

The five foods to never load into your grocery cart if you're trying to lose weight:

Simple sugars or carbohydrates: Cakes, ice cream, white bread ... all empty calories. As these simple sugars are rapidly absorbed into the blood stream, they cause a spike in your blood sugar levels, giving you a short-term energy. This then triggers an insulin reaction, leaving you feeling tired and hungry.

Ingredients you can't pronounce: Does "thiamine mononitrate" or "partially hydrogenated soybean oil" sound good? If you can't pronounce the first five ingredients, put that food down.

Foods with deceptive labels, like "low in fat": They've had to make up for the lack of flavor somehow, and that somehow is heaps of sugar and salt.

Canned foods high in sodium: Many canned foods are so full of salt they can contain more than half of your daily recommended intake. Too much sodium in your diet can give you high blood pressure.

Fried foods: Frying food dramatically increases the fat content, as oil is absorbed into whatever it is you have cooked. Choosing the right oils, like olive or sunflower, will make frying a little healthier.

In the kitchen with Teresa Giudice

The mom and reality star is no stranger to drama — or good Italian food She dishes on her cooking

Teresa Giudice, the table-flipping Italian matriarch of "The Real Housewives of New Jersey," has just released her third cookbook, "Fabulicious: Fast & Fit," featuring lightened-up versions of Italian favorites like chicken parm and fettuccine alfredo. We chatted with the TV star and mom of four about serving up specialties without the guilt.

▶ Teresa Giudice's cookbook, "Fabulicious: Fast & Fit," is available now.

When we think of Italian food, we often think of heavy dishes like eggplant parmesan or spaghetti and meatballs. What are your tricks for lightening up these meals while keeping the flavor intact?

The key to a lot of it is baking and not frying. In this book I do a naked chicken parmesan: You use reduced-fat mozzarella cheese, and then it's sauce, peppers, salt, chicken breast, olive oil and freshly grated parmesano-reggiano cheese. One of my favorites, I'll tell you, is the chicken bruschetta. That's [cooked] in the oven. I have a fettuccine carbonara in my book just using eggs and egg whites instead of the heavy cream. I definitely use whole-wheat pasta. My kids, I have to say, they've gotten used to the taste — at first they didn't like it. But now my kids love it. And you know what, it's really good for you because there's a lot of fiber in it.

How do you stay in shape?

Everyone's always [telling] me "you look amazing." They love my arms! My thing is, of course, just eat healthy, but you also have to exercise, and I think that keeps your heart healthy and it makes you look great also. My husband and I go to the gym together and this is the thing: You don't always do the same thing. You have to mix it up. I'm always mixing up my routine. I never do the same thing because then your body gets used to it and you don't see any change. Sometimes I use the machines, sometimes I use free weights, I do boxing, I do TRX. You have to mix it up so your body doesn't get used to the same thing — that's how you see results in your body.

So are you trying to be the next Bethenny Frankel with these low-fat recipes?

Well, my first cookbook was "Skinny Italian," and I think that was even before she even came out with Skinnygirl Margarita. It takes a year for a cookbook to come out, so I think when her Skinnygirl Margarita came out, my "Skinny Italian" book came out at the same time. I wasn't copying off of her or anything. If anything, you know, "Skinny Bitch" has been around so long. My thing is, everyone always would tell me "you're a skinny Italian," so that's where I got "Skinny Italian" from.

'Second nature'

Were cookbooks something you always envisioned yourself doing?

Well, cooking has always been my second nature. My parents are off the boat, I'm first-generation [Italian], so I've always cooked with my mom growing up and I've always been around authentic Italian food. I guess being on the "Housewives" gave me the opportunity to show another side of me, that yeah, I do cook for my family. For me it's very important to cook for my family every night. I think it's an important thing for every family to sit down together and have a meal together. I think the kids love it, and it's a good upbringing [for them].

American evolution is a real brain drain

I've just visited the Museum of Natural History in Washington, D.C., which has an excellent display on human origins. Many Americans need to visit that museum urgently. That so many of us deny evolution and believe in astrology merely shows how close to the Dark Ages we really are. If nearly half the population rejects the most basic scientific discoveries of the past 500 years, I wonder how many of them believe in gravity or Earth's motion around the sun. This has a practical effect. It means that percentage of people cannot work in any of the natural sciences. The collective brain-power of the United States is running at half-speed.

We must stand together, or alone

RE: "SOCIAL COMPACT WITH GRANDPARENTS DENIED": Mr. Charlesworth, I just have one question for you: Why should young people care about the health care, earned or not, of old people if old people don't care about the health care of young people? We need to think as ourselves as citizens who all need health care equally; till then everyone will — little by little — lose.

SUZY SANDOR, VIA E-MAIL

I'm with Booker: Romney not viable

I stand with Cory Booker! Not in the manipulative, cynical way the GOP would hope, but with the way Mayor Booker and President Obama stand. There's nothing wrong with private equity, but there's more to providing opportunity to the whole country than Mitt Romney's experience can offer.

SCOTT KEELEY, WILBRAHAM

Race and sexuality are no bedfellows

RE: "DISTURBING TO SEE PRIDEFUL HATRED": How come when people of any other race express their political or moral beliefs they are not seen as prideful, but as expressing their American viewpoint. But when a black person doesn't agree with "the norm," they are considered religious and not recognizing their history. Well, I have one thing to say to this: Black people know where we came from and where we are going. Nothing is equal. So if we wanna protect the one thing that is the norm — marriage — then so be it.

NICOLE PEARSALL, VIA E-MAIL

In response to the letter-writer who finds it disturbing and hypocritical to hear some black people say that marriage should be between a man and a woman, let me enlighten you a bit. This wasn't a black people idea. This was God's idea. I am a black man 24/7 and I can't change that. I have known gay people who decided that they weren't gay anymore. I wish I could flip-flop with my race, but I can't.

RE: "JUDGING BUSH: DID HE TANK ECONOMY?": The major reason the federal deficit ballooned in the past few years is that the costs of the Iraq and Afghanistan wars were "off budget" during the entire tenure of the Bush administration. We may never know the full financial cost.

Horoscope

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Co-workers who usually back your intentions when it comes to career matters may be nowhere to be found when you need their allegiance most.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. You should give your utmost attention to your duties and responsibilities. If you try to sweep things under the rug, all that'll result will be large lumps that will surely trip you up.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Be smart and avoid all forms of speculative involvements. Be especially careful not to gamble on the abilities or talents of another. It's tough enough taking a chance on your own situation.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Even though you're a creative person, it's still important to follow productive methods. Be careful not to go to such extremes that you stray from a solid path.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Sometimes the best foods aren't necessarily found in establishments that have the most expensive menus. If you are out wining and dining, keep this in mind.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Try not to turn your home into a military camp. If you make the rules too tough or rigid, the troops will eventually rebel.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. If some of your co-workers have been doing things that bug you or make you feel uncomfortable lately, this might not be the best day to bring it up. It could be smarter to keep mum for the nonce.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Being in the company of those who can afford to spend lavishly might leave you at odds with your wallet. Don't make the mistake of trying to operate on a high-society budget.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Unless you are of singular purpose, certain objectives that you hoped to get done won't be accomplished. Attempting several jobs simultaneously could cause you to cross wires.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. You'll know what is expected of you, yet you simply might not want to comply. However, guard against any inclination to pass the buck, because it will come back to haunt you.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. This isn't going to be one of your better days for handling your personal resources or, as a matter of fact, the resources of others. Be especially careful in all financial situations.

Mothering the New Mother

Many new mothers are surprised to find that having a newborn baby is hard work. Some new mothers wonder, "What about me? Don't I need attention, too? Do I really need a six-week check-up?"

The answer is yes! Just as your baby needs medical checks, mothers need care also. Start by making your postpartum appointment as soon as you get home from the hospital. (Many women find it helpful to schedule their postpartum appointment while they are still pregnant, around 2 – 4 weeks before they deliver the baby).

New mothers need care and comfort in order to recover from pregnancy and child-birth. Exhaustion is common and some mothers become depressed. Postpartum depression is more frequent than people may think. Many mothers suffer in secret. As hormones change, it is normal to have occasional blues or tears. However, when you feel sad much of the time you must call your maternity provider. Your healthcare provider will know what to do.

A happier, well-rested mother will have an easier time with the hard work of motherhood.

Many women want their family and friends to help without their asking. This lack of communication can lead to an overworked, exhausted mother. Ask for help! Family and friends can help with:

- Meal preparation
- Housework
- Laundry
- Shopping
- Caring for older children
- Transportation to and from appointments

When a new mother focuses only on herself and her baby, she is less likely to suffer from exhaustion, which can contribute to postpartum depression. Your family will benefit from your good health!

Astigmatism Correction Now Available Am I a candidate?

If you have been considering vision correction and were discouraged because you were told you have astigmatism and your correction was not treatable with LASIK, New England Eye Center has fantastic news for you. Not only can we treat Astigmatism with the iLASIK™ procedure, the cornea trained physicians at New England Eye Center now offer the most advanced procedures available to treat a variety of vision correction disorders.

What is astigmatism?

Astigmatism is a condition where vision is blurred by asymmetric steepening of the cornea or crystalline lens. Patients with astigmatism may not only notice blurring of vision at both distance and near, but can also note shadowing or ghosting of images as well. These vision symptoms are caused when light entering the eye is refracted or bent to multiple points in the eye, resulting in an out of focus image. Astigmatism is very common, and occurs in about 1 in 3 people.

Astigmatism can be easily corrected by contact lenses or eyeglasses. However, if glasses or contacts are troublesome, or not tolerated, there is another option. New England Eye Center offers many alternatives to glasses and contacts for the correction of all types of refractive error, including astigmatism. Custom LASIK and PRK are available not only for near and far sightedness, but for the correction of astigmatism as well. For cataract patients, astigmatism can be either treated with incisions made during cataract surgery, or with implantation of advanced lens technology.

Why should I have my Astigmatism treated with a surgical alternative to contacts and glasses?

If left uncorrected Astigmatism can cause eye strain, headaches and difficulties in everyday tasks from reading to working to outdoor activities. While glasses and many contact lenses are on the market to effectively correct astigmatism, if you are uncomfortable in either, it is important for you to know you have options. While glasses are your safest alternative, many people either are not able to tolerate their entire astigmatism correction in eyeglasses, or do not achieve the clear vision they desire or need for everyday living. Contact lenses, worn and cared for properly are a wonderful alternative to glasses. However, contact lenses are not without risks, and are not well tolerated by everyone. Many people are contact lens intolerant, whether due to underlying dry eye, reaction to contact lens solutions, or corneal inflammation or infections due to contact lens wear. For these patients, contact lenses are no longer an option and eyeglasses do not allow for functioning at the highest level.

What other procedures are available to me to correct my vision?

The physicians at New England Eye Center routinely perform LASIK and PRK, however there are lens procedures for patients which can also provide freedom from contacts and glasses. The Visian implantable collamer lens, which has the added benefit of being removable, can treat a wide variety of patients who are nearsighted and it is also a wonderful alternative for patients with dry eye issues or people who do not qualify for LASIK. For patients who have added reading glasses to their vision correction needs, many options are available, including monovision and conductive keratoplasty. For patients with a cataract, intraocular lenses are available that offer improved freedom from glasses at distance, intermediate, and near vision. These include the Crystalens accommodating lens, as well as the Restor and Tecnis multifocal lenses. For our cataract patients with astigmatism, Toric intraocular lenses can be implanted to neutralize their astigmatism.

IT'S COOL TO EAT FRESH FRUITS AND VEGGIES WHEN IT'S HOT

Fresh fruits and vegetables are easy to find as the weather gets warmer. You can buy lots of different locally grown kinds at area farmers' markets or fruit and vegetable stands. You can also find a large variety of fresh fruits and vegetables in the produce section of your grocery store year round.

By eating a mixture of brightly-colored fresh fruits and vegetables, you and your family will:
- Stay cool when it gets hot, since fruits and vegetables contain a lot of water
- Get lots of the vitamins and minerals that your body needs to stay healthy
- Have more energy from replacing sugary or processed food with fresh foods

And, when you shop at local farmers' markets and fruit and vegetable stands, you'll also:
- Help your community by supporting local farmers/growers
- Create family togetherness when you shop together and discover new healthy food options
- Give your children the chance to learn more about the many kinds of fruits and vegetables that are available

By shopping at a local farmers' market or fruit and vegetable stand, you should also enjoy healthier fresh food since your produce will not have traveled as far or been handled as much as food shipped from a great distance. Plus, often local farms participating in farmers' markets will offer non-produce items such as home-made cheese, jam, and breads, and some will offer free samples for you to try. You can also often find local flowers and plants to buy to brighten your summer lunch or dinner table.

Many Farmers' Markets Accept EBT Cards (SNAP)

While you might think it costs more, sometimes fresh local food can be less expensive because farmers don't have to pay to ship food over long distances like some grocery stores do. And some Massachusetts farmers' markets accept EBT cards from those who qualify for the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP). Visit www.massfarmersmarkets.org to learn more.

Our online Wellness Center in the Living Healthy section makes it easy for you to search for farmers' markets throughout Massachusetts. Visit us at ChooseBMCHP.com to find a farmers' market near you.

Caring for Your Aging Parents

Cambridge Health Alliance

Being a caregiver or an advisor for an aging parent can be a challenge. We know they need more support than ever before, and we want to help them manage their lives and make sure their needs are being met.

When it comes to healthcare, knowing how to make the best decision at the right time is everything. That's why Cambridge Health Alliance provides a broad range of services to support older adults with different health needs during new stages of their lives.

We provide primary care for thousands of older adults - from active people living at home, to those in senior apartments, assisted living, and nursing homes. If you are one of the many children serving as an advisor or caregiver for an older parent, we can help.

Primary care services your parents can choose:

• Primary Care –We now have primary care teams who specialize in older adult care at five neighborhood locations. These teams offer check ups, sick visits, and help with ongoing health issues. They plan their work in a different way to spend more time with older patients and monitor their health more closely. Their goal is to help older adults be as healthy as possible and provide support to you, their caregivers.

• House Calls – This program provides primary care to older adults in Cambridge and Somerville who are homebound and do not have access to the doctor's office. Our doctors and nurse practitioners visit patients' homes and coordinate all health care and social services with appropriate community partners.

• Elder Service Plan (ESP) – This program is an all-inclusive, coordinated program for frail elders who are eligible to be in a nursing home but want to live at home. As a fully managed healthcare plan, ESP offers a full range of services. This includes primary care, physical and occupational therapy, and specialty care like dental, podiatry, and optometry. Our staff also coordinate social services, like transportation and homemaking needs. This allows older adults to live as independently as possible in their homes and communities. ESP is available for people 55 and older in 11 local communities around Cambridge, MA.

Cambridge Health Alliance is here to support you and your parent as they enter new phases of their lives. If they recently changed their living situation, had a health problem(s) that needs attention, or just want a new doctor, call the CHA Doctor Finder Service at 617-665-1305. You can also visit www.challiance.org/beapatient.

C's looking to advance without a two guard

Allen, Bradley both hurting heading into Game 6 tonight (8 p.m., ESPN) Rivers calls Bradley '50-50' Philly fans will be ready for Garnett after 'fair-weather' comment

Dwight Howard went down a long time ago. Derrick Rose was done after one playoff game. Chris Bosh might not make back in time for Miami to defend its Eastern Conference title.

It may be shocking to say, but the Boston Celtics are relatively healthy compared to this season's early contenders for the East crown.

Ray Allen will likely give it another go tonight, but in Game 5 the Celtics' 3-point specialist looked the worst he has since he arrived in Boston in the summer of 2007.

Despite getting the start over Avery Bradley, who did not dress due to huge injury issues of his own with two bad shoulders, Allen scored just five points on 2-of-7 shooting. TNT cameras even caught him wincing in pain on the bench during the game as it seemed as though the bone spurs in his right ankle were acting up once again.

Allen underwent double ankle surgery back in April of 2007 and has had issues with his ankles dating all the way back to 2003.

The C's sniper seemed to have turned the corner after the first two games of the Philadelphia series, scoring 12 points in Game 1 and 17 points in Game 2. There is also the fact that Philadelphia, and Jrue Holiday specifically, has seemed determined to not let Allen get going as they have not allowed No. 20 to run the baseline freely as they typically likes to do.

Philly's Elton Brand looked 10 years younger in Game 5

Brand has scored 19 points twice this postseason, the former coming at Chicago.

Sixers not yet startled

Doug Collins wants his too-young-to-know-any-better team to know that they have a shot to perform a feat similar to that of the 1982 Sixers, who upset Larry Bird and the Celtics at Boston Garden in a Game 7.

"The big thing I said to them was 'how bad do you want to go back there for Game 7," the Sixers head coach said. "You can throw up all the odds against teams winning a seventh game on the road. But I went back and pulled up the ghosts of Celtics past in 1982."

To pull it off, Philly can't afford a 15-turnover game like they posted in Game 5. JON MARKS

Philly still wants to fly

The Sixers certainly don't want to see Rajon Rondo out on the break like he did in Game 5 when he continously found Brandon Bass and Kevin Garnett for dunks and wide open jumpers.
But Philly still wants to run themselves.

"They took it to another level on defense (Monday) night and were able to get out on the break," said point guard Jrue Holiday. JON MARKS

▶ David Ortiz is hot at the plate and in front of a microphone these days.

More turmoil despite wins

The Red Sox are currently playing their best baseball of the 2012 season.

That doesn't mean that everything is going swimmingly.

Just as David Ortiz was getting overwhelming praise from media and fans for holding a players-only meeting, the Sox slugger lashed out with some choice words for reporters and even the Boston front office.

"Well, let me tell you, I was reading an article (that) talked about the leaders people call 'leaders' in this town," Ortiz told ESPNBoston.com. "Basically it seems like no matter what you do, it's not good enough … And you can only call 'leaders' the guys who are out diving for balls on the field or calling pitches behind the plate?"

Ortiz seemed to be referencing the now-retired Jason Varitek and second baseman Dustin Pedroia all while taking a few jabs at 98.5 FM's Tony Massarotti, who recently criticized Ortiz for waiting too long to hold a meeting.

"I have always wondered whether or not he would really do this sort of thing," Massarotti said on-air. "He's always been more the kind to put his arm around someone, pull them aside, 'Hey what's bothering you.' Very empathetic, sympathetic, calm. He's not the kind of guy to start flipping stuff over. If in this one he was pissed off? Good. Someone in there needed to get pissed off a long time ago."

Quoted

"I don't get no respect. Not from the media. Not from the front office. What I do is never the right thing."

RED SOX DH DAVID ORTIZ

10 Ortiz already has 10 home runs and 30 RBIs this season, including a moonshot blast against Baltimore on Monday night.

This ain't your college students' Davis Square

Forget triple-deckers Long live Maxwell's Green! Development challenges old notions of Somerville

It isn't the traditional Davis Square apartment living, that's for sure. Now leasing for summer occupation, Maxwell's Green is about as far from the Somerville triple-decker as you can get. This massive 184-apartment development includes urbane amenities like an onsite yoga and fitness center, club suite, theater, cyber cafe, roof deck, underground bicycle storage and garage parking with electric car-charging stations.

Location-wise, Maxwell's Green is perfectly positioned by the community path, about a 10-minute walk from Davis Square and the Red Line T. Set around a common green, 62 units are currently up for leasing, with a further 122 units to be rolled out by the beginning of 2013. However, all exteriors and public spaces will be finished by initial move-in, so residents don't have to live with dust and construction.

"This is the first highly 'amenitized' development in the whole of Somerville," says Kyle Warwick, principal for Gate Residential Properties, which joined with KSS Realty to form Davis Square Partners for this venture. "Rents are competitive with Boston and Cambridge and the amenities outshine anything around here. We were able to do this because we had the space. It's unique to find this large space in one of the densest cities in the world."

There's a reason why the five-and-a-half acre land parcel was sitting vacant. The area was a Brownfield — that is, polluted postindustrial-use land that needed regulatory cleanup before it could be reused.

"Residents didn't like what was here before — an industrial wasteland," says Warwick. "This development is good for Somerville as a whole."

West Coast meets East Village

Up-and-coming interior designer Kyle Schuneman's advice for maximizing small spaces Before and after

Kyle Schuneman wants to help you think inside the box — that is, the miniscule one-bedroom that commands half of your monthly income. Earlier this month, Hautelook.com asked the 26-year-old interior designer (recently named a "Tastemaker" by Los Angeles Magazine) to make over three typically small New York City apartments in his signature California style. The challenge, he said, was to conjure a coastal theme in a small space "without making it feel like a seafood restaurant." Select items from these makeovers are on sale today and tomorrow at Hautelook.com.

Schuneman, whose book "The First Apartment Book: Cool Design for Small Spaces" publishes this August, chatted with us about how to invite some much-needed West Coast ease into our often-cramped East Coast quarters.

▶ Kyle Schuneman shows an apartment some California love.

How do you define West Coast style?

I think it's casual, I think it's approachable. I think if you look at it and it's effortless, and it doesn't feel like it's designed by anyone specific and it just feels organic, then that's really California for you.

So the size constraints of the typical East Coast apartment aren't a problem?

Not at all. California is full of an eclectic mix; I think it's important to embrace that and find your own style. It's all about feeling — if people stop by, they can come in and it's warm and inviting. It doesn't feel uptight.

Can West Coasters take any tips from East Coasters?

You guys do crazy things with your storage, so I've learned a lot about using every nook and cranny. You have such beautiful architecture to pull from, but you don't have the luxury of space. So you have a very structured approach to design, and I think that it can be really mixed well with California style at the same time.

What inspired you to focus on small spaces?

I grew up in a 1,200-square-foot apartment with four people; my parents turned the master bedroom into another bedroom and turned the closet into my sister's room. ... I think you guys have constraints, but they're creative constraints. I think that having a box to work in is sometimes easier than having an unlimited space. Think from an architect's point of view, start with function and build from there.

Before & after

▶ Floor-to-ceiling window treatments and painted moldings bring the eye up.

More tips for tiny rooms:

1. "Everything has to function at least twice." Choose furniture that also functions as storage.
2. "Think of your rug as your fifth wall." Aggressive wall colors and patterns can make a small space feel smaller. Keep your walls neutral and go wild with your floor coverings.
3. "Bring the eye up." What your apartment lacks in depth, it can usually make up for in height. Highlight decorative moldings and opt for floor-to-ceiling window treatments.

SMARTPHONE CHECK SCAM TARGETS ATTORNEYS

By Attorney George Warshaw

I love technology. I'm not alone. It can make your life easier, but also more painful.

A new smart phone app allows you to deposit a check right into your bank account by scanning it with your iPhone or Android just like a deposit at an ATM machine.

Enable the app for your bank account, scan the check, the deposit is made. Add a little criminal ingenuity and here is your scam:

A seller of a property attends a closing. The closing attorney hands the seller a check for $200,000 from the attorney's escrow account to pay what the seller is owed. The seller leaves but returns a few minutes later.

"Could you wire transfer the money to me instead? Checks have a clear period and I need to use the money now."

The unsuspecting attorney accommodates the seller, takes the check back and arranges payment by an electronic wire transfer of funds that day.

Uh oh! When that devilish seller left with the check for a few minutes, he used his phone to scan it, deposit it and scam the attorney. By then getting paid by a wire transfer of funds, he got paid twice - for big money.

Isn't technology grand, $200 grand, that is!
